ATHLETE TRAINING ZONES

We are introducing a new system to manage attendance more effectively and ensure our teams perform at their best. Starting from the new season, we will be implementing Green, Amber, and Red Zones to categorise different periods throughout the year.

Here's a breakdown of each zone:

Green Zones: Green Zones are designated as acceptable times for holiday periods. During these times, you are welcome to take breaks as needed without affecting your place on the team.

Amber Zones: During Amber Zones, athletes are allowed to miss ONE session throughout the year. However, this must be either pre-booked or due to unavoidable sickness. This will help us maintain a steady training rhythm while accommodating necessary absences.

Red Zones: The 'Red Zone' refers to the three weeks leading up to competitions. If your child misses training during this period, they risk losing their spot on their team. This system, commonly used in other cheerleading programs, ensures we present our best at competitions. The absence of one athlete affects the entire stunt group and team, we therefore cannot allow this to happen next season.

Please note: Athletes who are unwell or injured may still be required to attend training sessions to observe and support their teammates. This practice allows them to remain engaged with the team's strategies and dynamics, ensuring they stay mentally prepared and up-to-date with any changes or new techniques being implemented.

As a parent, you will be required to sign a commitment letter confirming your dedication to your child's team. Commitment in a team sport is crucial, as it ensures consistency, fosters teamwork, and helps your child and their teammates achieve their full potential.

Training zone dates will be confirmed in your welcome pack upon joining a team.
